Lomitan Among Pacific War Dead Arrivals

His family was awaiting instructions today before completing arrangements for final interment of former Lomitan Rube C. Dixon, one of 3280 Pacific war dead who arrived in San Francisco harbor aboard the vessel Honda Knot.

Tribute to the heroes will be paid this weekend in an impressive memorial ceremony to be held in Los Angeles.

Six of the 88 Southland dead, representing symbolically the Navy, Army, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Air Force, and service-connected civilians, will lie in state for 24 hours starting at 2 p.m. Saturday as part of the memorial service.

Navy FC3-C Dixon, who died at sea near the Fiji islands in November 1942, will be buried in Wasco, Calif.

An aunt of the former Lomitan, Mrs. Newton Rowell, who lives at 24808 Oak st., said that Dixon perished shortly after he left for overseas from causes which had not been revealed to her. He was 21 years old.

Dixon lived in Lomita in 1941, prior to joining the service in February 1942.

The Lomita sailor was buried first in the Fiji islands and later reinterred at Pearl Harbor.

His father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Rube C. Dixon, moved to Wasco five years ago. He was born in Andlers, Okla. and attended Bacone college in Muskogee.

Mrs. Rowell stated that many local friends plan to make the trip north to Wasco to extend personal tribute.
